Dr. Martin Luther King

Dr. Martin Luther King Dr. Martin Luther King had a dream that the world would be a better place. He wanted all people to be respected and be good people. We owe a lot to Dr. King and the progress he made when he was alive. Today we still have some bad people in this world but that is okay because we have a lot of good people who do really good things to try and make it a better place to live. There was a rule on buses that black people had to sit in the back and white people had to sit in the front. Black people were only allowed in the back. White people were allowed to go in the back if there was no more space in the front but they didn't like to do that because they thought they were better. They weren't better. Black people would not have to give up their seats to white people when Dr. Martin Luther King showed them that they are people to and have just as much rights. No one can be kept out of places like hotels, lunch counters, gas stations, and theaters because of their race.

Thank you, Dr. King, for everything you have done to make the world better. My dream is that everyone should be treated the same way too. I have friends who are all different colors and to me we are all the same even if we have different skin color.
